
Chapter 1

PRESENT DAY

Rory

Water was heavy against my thighs, rushing into the car as it slowly sank to the bottom of the river. I was trapped, drowning not only in river water but sorrow. Sorrow for not telling Caden how I really feel, and for the fact I will never see my friends again. Then I hear it, the maniacal laugh beside me, overpowering the sound of rushing water.

I turn in the seat and see Anthony sitting in his seat laughing his ass off as if our current predicament was something to laugh about.

“You’re insane,” I gasp out, horrified.

“And you’re going to die.” He laughs again. “No one is going to save you. Not your silly little friends and not that idiot boyfriend. You had it all when you had me, but you threw it all away, and for what?”